Jim is a the spirit of all America. Othere were poor boy and this is quite a serious loss New Englanders or Southerners; he wore the marks of no section. Like no other man of his day, he was an AMERI-CAN-the first American. And it is the qualities which he impressed upon his country-courage, justice, love of liberty and eplightenment-that our nation has embodied in its life, and that we call the true Americanism to-day. It is just and right that the public schools of America unite year by year to do honor to this first American.

Washington's furewell message to his countrymen was a reminder that a nation governed by public opinion must be, before all, an enlightened nation. Americs now lifts up her public schools as her response to his appeal that in this land knowledge should be universal.

Os his birthday we recognize that these public schools are the arteries through which flows the life blood of the Republic. If our untion is to fulfill her divine mission, our citizens must guard well this birthlight, the inheritance of every child over whom floats the American flag.

We note that our old friend Ike Drummond, the Wandering Jew of Journalism, who has been editing a paper at Beaver City, Oklahoma, for some time probably started and published more different papers in more different places than any man now living and he always does his work well, too. Come back to Kansas, old man; come back to Kansas. The good times, so long on the way, have arrived, and the newspaper-starting business is in need of a Moses .- Gaylord, Kanses, Herald.

The foregoing is from the pen of Lew Headley, we suppose, although, like the writer, Lew has to answer in the future for bringing up a large family in a newspaper office. This makes it a little difficult, sometimes, to tell whether it is the old man or one of the "kids" that is furnishing the gray matter in an editorial write-up. Away back in '82 we advised Lew to stick to his farm in Mitchell county, but he wouldn't do it. He rented out his farm and went back into the Gaylord Herald office, where he has put in most of the time since, moulding public opinion, helping other people into office, and giving gilt-edged notices for a mess of sausage and a pat of butter. He has been the chief element in building up Gaylord and keeping it a rattling good town eyer since. For all his work for Smith county and the people in it, he has been twice appointed postmaster of his town at a low salary, and served almost continually as secretary of the Republican county central committee, besame fixed in my mind that old Time well, we have done just about the same and the whole free silver sixteen to one (gentleman) outfit.
